US human rights report shines spotlight on Penan tribe

A new US government human rights report has highlighted the Penan tribe's battle to protect their rainforests in Sarawak, in Malaysian Borneo, from logging. (

The US State Department document cites claims by indigenous rights groups that Sarawak Chief Minister Taib Mahmud's government has leased the Penan's land 'to logging companies and land developers in exchange for political favors and money'.

Taib Mahmud has been in power for 30 years, and won state elections last week. Thousands of Penan tribespeople were unable to vote, because they have not been issued with identity cards.

The US report describes accounts that 'logging companies harassed and sometimes threatened vocal Penan leaders' and that 'workers from two logging companies... regularly sexually abused Penan women and girls'. A government minister has confirmed the rapes, but no action has been taken against the perpetrators.

The hunter-gatherer Penan are fighting to keep their last remaining rainforest safe from the logging companies. One Penan woman told Survival

It's a conspiracy to denigrate those in the forefront

It was expected that vested interests who were uncomfortable with the civil society campaign for a strong Lokpal legislation would strike back sooner or later after they had to concede the demand for a joint committee for drafting the bill.

The response has started with rumour-mongering, insinuations and a CD that shows the drafting committee co-chairman Shanti Bhushan purportedly telling politicians Mulayam Singh Yadav and Amar Singh that his son Prashant Bhushan, another member of the committee, could influence a judge for Rs 4 crore. The CD, which was delivered in media offices in Delhi last week, showed the anti-corruption campaigners in a poor light. If the conversation did actually take place that would certainly dent their reputation and credibility.

But Prashant Bhushan has questioned the genuineness of the CD and has asserted that it was doctored and fabricated. He has produced reports from two reputed forensic experts who studied the CD and came to the conclusion that it is not the correct reproduction of an original conversation but a clever combination of portions of different speeches. Bhushan's view that the circulation of the CD was an attempt to malign the anti-corruption movement and to undermine judicial proceedings in the 2G spectrum case seems to be credible. The judge whose name appears in the CD had handled these cases and Prashant Bhushan was the lawyer. From the details of the reports given from the forensic experts it seems likely that Bhushan is speaking the truth. But there should be an investigation and whoever is found guilty should be punished. Anna Hazare, who has led the Lokpal bill campaign, has also expressed the same view.

The very fact that nobody has claimed ownership and responsibility for the CD is itself suspicious. That strengthens the view that there is a conspiracy to denigrate those who have stood up to fight the establishment on the issue of corruption. Congress general secretary Digvijay Singh's questions on the money spent on Anna Hazare's agitation at Jantar Mantar in Delhi are also seen as part of a campaign to run down the civil society movement. It is likely that there will be more disinformation and defamation attempts in future. If anybody who champions honesty and rectitude is found lacking in integrity, he would only shame and weaken the movement. But circumstances point to deception on the part of some who are opposed to the Lokpal movement.

A pledge to revolutionize Agriculture

Despite numerous and regular reports in the media about the presence of pesticides and other chemical contaminants in food and water, we have not been goaded into searching for and demanding food grown in a non-toxic way. We are also very isolated from the food production process - many of us do not have the faintest idea where our food comes from or how it is grown.

While the latter is a matter of personal interest, we need to understand that chemical agriculture operations and the wanton commercialization of farming affect each one of us adversely, even the city dweller ensconced in a high-rise for whom life begins and ends in a city. Their effect on the environment and wildlife is also well-documented. The cruelty of modern-day animal husbandry, whether for milk, eggs or meat is horrifying and repulsive.

The organic farming initiative is not new and has been taken up in various parts of the country over time. Organic farming is being adopted in parts of Rajasthan, Gujarat, Bihar, Haryana, Andhra Pradesh, Bangalore, Karnataka and Punjab etc. In India, as against 42,000 hectares under certified organic farming during the 2003-04, initial estimates for 2009-10 indicate organic agriculture under certification has grown to 1.05 million hectares. Out of this, nearly 750,000 hectares are fully certified while the remaining 300,000 hectares are under various stages of conversion.

The International Panacea Limited (IPL) is the country's pioneer's organization of grassroots organic farmers. Since Indian agriculture continues to remain a source of livelihood for mostly small farmers and peasants. IPL is the organization working in this arena leading the organic movement through implementation of large scale organic farming projects sponsored by various agencies which broadly involves awareness about the benefit of organic farming, organizing them to form clusters, training management practices and documentation, facilitation for certification and establishment of marketing channels for better returns to the producers.

"Promotion of organic farming will not only ensure increased availability of organic and biological sources of nutrients, but will also provide technologies and information which will help other forms of agriculture in restoring soil health and conservation of resources." said by Mr. Suraj Bhagchandka, President, IPL.

"Besides farmers, consumers too, stand to gain in many ways by switching over to organic produce. One of the major benefits is that the consumer can safely consume organic food products in the knowledge that no harmful chemicals were used in their production. Organic products are more nutritious, and in many cases, also taste better than those produced using chemicals. It is also found that food produced organically last longer than conventionally produced ones" said by the President, IPL.

Apart from India, IPL has undertaken a project in Ethiopia. In the near future, IPL products will be available in many European countries, Asian Countries as well as African countries. IPL has pledged to revolutionize agriculture by its innovations in the organic civilization.

Ranbir to do an item number for kids flick

Mumbai, April 19: Taking time out from shooting for his two under production movies 'Rockstar' and 'Barfee', Bollywood heartthrob Ranbir Kapoor is doing his first ever promotional video for Vikas Bahl's 'Chillar Party'.

This is for the first time ever, there is going to be an item song or promotional video for a kids flick.

Chillar Party's music has been composed by Amit Trivedi and this particular song is a mix of street instruments, local voices and dialect. Choreographed by Bosco Ceasar who has also mixed street dancing with contemporary style, the song is sung by Amit and his mother.

"Ranbir saw the film and loved it. That's when we requested him if he would do an item song for the kids and he loved the idea, and readily agreed," said director Bahl.

Ranbir plays himself in the video in a "tapori" style which is inspired by one of the characters in the film. The young actor has been bonding with the kids to make them comfortable and getting inspired by some of their moves, he said.

Health & Science

Avoiding the surgeon's knife

It is common knowledge that one of the usual emergencies that involve surgical procedures with the surgeon running into a canter is due to appendicitis. It is also one of the prime suspects for a patient complaining with a pain in the abdomen and is promptly ruled out by expertise before moving on to the probable diagnosis.

Appendix is a vestigial organ in the body that has remained even though evolution has managed to get rid of many such unnecessary organs. For some reason appendix has remained and for whatever reason it needs to get removed from the body it has not been missed later in life. It is a small pouch like structure in the large intestine in the right lower area of the abdomen before the convoluting pipe forms into the rectum. This pouch is a small finger like area and drains without much fuss mainly of the mucus that is likely to form in it. More often than not there is no entry or exit of the products of the digestion into the appendix and does not seem to participate actively in the process. But in some situations for some unknown reason the mucus does not drain out and remains in the appendix and becomes a source of fodder to the bacteria traversing incidentally. It can lead to a bacterial infection that is the cause for inflammation when appendicitis sets in. The fear with the scenario is that the living on the edge, appendix can break out releasing the infected particles into the abdomen causing a condition called as peritonitis that can lead to shock and unfortunate consequences.

Fever, nausea and vomiting are the usual symptoms that accompany the abdominal pain which is the main indication of the problem. What is paramount in a patient who has a complaint of abdominal pain is to rule out other probable causes of the pain. A patient with appendicitis has pain on slightest movement, even on coughing or taking a deep breath. It seems to start around the navel region and spreads to the right lower abdomen. The pain gets worse even while trying to lift or move the right lower limb inwards or upwards and it gets worse even on pressure in the left side of the abdomen the pain is felt in the right lower abdominal area. There are other conditions wherein the abdominal pain is worse. Even a urinary infection or a formation of stone in the urinary tract, acute intestinal infections, conditions like endometriosis in women or a misplaced fertilized ovum finding its way into the fallopian tube can all cause severe pain in the abdomen.

Inflammation of pancreas, liver, chronic diseases of the digestive tract like Crohn's disease, cysts in ovaries are the other usual suspects that can cause severe abdominal pain that your physician would rule out before a confirmation of appendicitis is done.

If there is no formation of pus in the appendix and if the inflammation is still only in the surging state and by considering other factors like the white blood cell count, other investigations, homoeopathic medicine is administered. Ars alb, Pyrogenum, Phos, Baptisia, Berb vulg, Sarsaparilla, Mag phos, Colocynth come into play that can abort the process of inflammation and infection. To see that more often than not surgeon's knife is not warranted, homoeopathic medicine is the safe option.

Deccan posts comfortable win over Delhi

New Delhi, April 19: A quick-fire half-century by Sunny Sohal and an equally useful knock of 49 from captain Kumar Sangakkara helped Deccan Chargers register a 16-run victory over Delhi Daredevils in their Indian Premier League match here on Tuesday.

Opting to bat, Sohal (62, 41b, 8X4, 1X6) and Sangakkara (49, 35b, 8X4, 1X6) put on a 92-run stand for the second-wicket to set a solid platform and post a competitive total of 168 for four, even though some disciplined bowling by the Daredevils at the end managed to put brakes on the Deccan scoring rate.

But ultimately the total proved to be too big for the hosts, who seemed hardly in the race, losing wickets at regular intervals here at the Ferozshah Kotla ground.

Even as David Warner (51, 48b 5x4 1x6) scored a valuable half-century and Yogesh Nagar (23, 11b 1x4 2x6) played a little cameo at the end but that was never going to be enough as the home team finished at 152 for seven in their allotted 20 overs.

For the Hyderabad outfit, Harmeet Singh (two for 27) and Daniel Christian (two for 38) provided important breakthroughs while Ojha, Amit Mishra and Shikhar Dhawan chipped in with a wicket apiece.

Chasing a target of 169, Daredevils captain Virender Sehwag came out firing all cylinders in his bid to give his team a positive start as he struck four boundaries off Christian's over, while Warner also gave him good company at the other end but the former's stay at the wicket was cut short by Harmeet Singh for a seven-ball 12.

And the next two overs saw the hosts being pushed on to the back foot when Christian and Harmeet accounted for the wickets of Naman Ojha and Aaron Finch to leave the Daredevils reeling at 38 for three.

While Christian trapped Ojha (2) leg before,

Harmeet dismissed Finch for a nought as he edged one to Sangakkara. It was then up to Warner and Venugopal Rao (21) to consolidate the innings and the duo managed to take the team to 78 for three after 10 overs.

But after putting on 52 runs for the fourth-wicket with Warner, Rao, while trying to hit a six hit one straight down Christian's throat off Amit Mishra's bowling. At the other end, although Warner managed to hold his ground but just after completing his half-century, he gave a simple catch to Ravi Teja off part-time spinner Shikhar Dhawan's bowling, after being dropped in the previous over.

Irfan Pathan's horrible IPL continued as he was quickly back in the dressing room, leaving the Daredevils with an uphill task. Yogesh Nagar and James Hopes (17 off 14 balls) gave some hope to the home crowd, hitting a few big ones but could not take the team home.

Earlier, Sohal opened the innings with a four through the covers, while Shikhar Dhawan added two more boundaries of consecutive balls of Ashok Dinda's over — the very first over of the match — to set the rhythm. But Pathan had other plans and he managed to get the first breakthrough for the home team when Dhawan (8) dragged one back on to his stumps trying to slash an away going delivery.

Captain Sangakkara wasted no time and almost immediately got into the action and along with Sohal, kept stealing a boundary or two every over to maintain a good run-rate, even though Pathan and Morne Morkel, who replaced Dinda after his expensive first over, managed to keep it reasonably tight.

But moment left-arm spinner Shahbaz Nadeem was introduced into the attack, Sangakkara straight away punished the youngster with a lofted six over the deep mid-wicket and two boundaries to place the Chargers in a good position.

Sangakkara and Sohal's attacking approach coupled with Delhi's fielding lapses enabled the Hyderabad outfit to reach 90 for one at the end of 10 overs. But just when things were looking dangerous, Dinda struck back for the Daredevils, sending back Sangakkara as Aaron Finch, back-peddalling from inside the 30-yard circle, latched on to a brilliant catch.

Nadeem, however, ended Sohal's fine knock as Finch took another good catch, once again running backwards. Cameron White (31 off 25 balls), though hit a six and two fours but some tight bowling by the Delhi bowlers at the end did not let the Chargers put as many on the board as they would have liked to.

Flower in running for India coach job: report

London, April 19: England cricket coach Andy Flower is among the few who have been reportedly shortlisted by the BCCI for the India job left vacant by Gary Kirsten, prompting a worried ECB to offer the Zimbabwean a new three-year deal.

According to The Daily Telegraph, Flower, along with Duncan Fletcher, are among the shortlisted candidates for the post vacated by Kirsten after India's World Cup triumph.

The ECB, which is determined to hold on to Flower after he guided England to the Ashes and World Twenty20 triumphs, is doing all it can to prevent the former wicketkeeper from being lured by India.

"Andy Flower has been offered a new three-year contract as the England and Wales Cricket Board attempts to head off any moves for their highly-rated coach from India," the report said.

"Telegraph Sport understands Flower is due to meet Hugh Morris, the managing director of the England team, at the end of the month to discuss his long-term future and the direction of the England set-up. It is thought that Flower is on a rolling staff contract, which offers the same protection rights as any other full-time employee."

Flower, who has been on a holiday after England was knocked out in the quarterfinals of the ODI World Cup, has been non-committal about his future. After the Ashes series, Flower had said that personally I don't look much further forward than a few months.
